New Lenox Pastor Praised By Press

St. Louis Paper Calls Him "Fire Eating Patriot"

Rev. A. W. Hamilton, pastor of the New Lenox M. E. church, who was appointed chaplain at the Joliet penitentiary, is drawing country wide attention thru the write-ups given him in many news papers. The St. Louis Post-Despatch in commenting on the chaplain's address at the penitentiary on Defense Day in a column article, referred to him as a "fire eating patriot." Special stress was laid on his statement that there are many profiteers who ought to be in prison instead of being out among the public whom they are robbing and bleeding at every turn possible. The convicts cheered his address.

Rev. Mr. Hamilton has been mentioned quite frequently in the Chicago papers in their stories dealing with Leopold and Loeb in the penitentiary.

Notorious Wayside Inn Is Closed; Keeper Fined $500

The notorious Wayside Inn on the Lincoln Highway east of Frankfort, has at last been closed up under a temporary injunction filed by the Will County State's Attorney Robert Martin. This came about as the result of a recent raid made on this road house by Sheriff John Walker of Joliet who found beer testing 4 per cent was being sold. Cecelia Collins who was running the place was arrested and released on $2000 bonds. Last Saturday she was arraigned before Judge Drew in county court and fined $500 which she paid.

Tony Augustino, labor leader of Chicago Heights and father of the owner of the property against which the injunction has been issued. This joint of iniquity ought to be closed for good as it has been a ruin to the young folks of the community, many young men getting drunk at this place and getting a start on the moonshine route.

Altho Augustino is said to have promised the sheriff's office that he would run the place strictly according to law, the injunction was issued just the same.

All the school children took part in the Flag Salute, following which the audience sang, "America". Mrs. Yunker led in prayer. Other numbers on the program were as follows: Recitation by Lois Hyink, a song by the trio, and patriotic songs by the Wier school. Miss Catherine McClaughry, country Life Director gave an address on Defense Day. The program closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner."

Marley Grain Dealer Leaves No Will

In addition to farm land and other real estate, Alexander Haley, formerly of New Lenox township, who died Aug. 30, leaves approximately $5,000 in personal property to be divided between his widow and one daughter who survive him. Made in a petition asking letters of administration which has been granted by Judge Drew in the probate court. The widow, Mrs. Margie Haley, is named as administratrix.

According to her petition her husband owned 150 acres of farm land in Alberta, Canada, some lots in New Lenox township, an elevator building in Marley and some coal on the right of way of the Wabash railroad in New Lenox township.

Beside this property he had about $5,000 in notes, bonds and cash. Mr. Haley left no will.

CAR OF KARL E. KRAPP OF MOKENA STOLEN IN CHICAGO SUN.

Karl E. Krapp, Mokena village clerk and assistant cashier at the Mokena State Bank, was the victim of automobile thieves Sunday. He and members of his family had motored to Chicago Sunday noon and while attending a program at the Orchestra Hall, their Ford sedan which had been parked in front of Lyon & Healy's, was stolen. The car was parked there about one and its disappearance was first noticed at 3 o'clock at the close of the program at Orchestra hall. Mr. Krapp at once notified the police and within 15 minutes after the robbery was noticed, every police station in Chicago had a description of the stolen car, but up to date no trace has been found of it. Mr. Krapp carried auto theft insurance. The car was locked, but it is thought the auto thieves forced the footboards up from the bottom of the car and thus got into the car and got away. Mr. Krapp said that in addition to the car about $50 of personal property which was in the car was also stolen.

Local Pupils To Set Stiff Pace In National Contest

School children of this community have determined to give those of the rest of the United States and Canada a hard race for the honors of winning the $15,000 prize model electric home which is the principle national award in the Better Home Lighting Activity contest.

The local electrical league, which is sponsoring the local contest under the supervision of the national Lighting Educational Committee, reports increasing interest among school pupils over ten years of age. Many have already registered.

In addition to the national prizes offered by the Lighting Educational Committee which range from the $15,000 home to college scholarships and other lesser awards, the local Electrical League has arranged a list of valuable local prizes which will go to the winners of the 600 word essay contest in this section. Only the sectional prize winners will be permitted to enroll in the national competition.

The purpose of the contest is to teach the children, as well as to direct attention of their parents, to the relationship between proper home lighting and good vision. The activity has the active support of the National Educational Assn., and the Eyesight Conservation Council of America and other allied organizations.

NO KILLING FROST BEFORE TENTH OF OCT.

Will and Cook County farmers need have little fear for their corn crop from killing frost before Oct. 10, according to a statement issued by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute, established to improve the dairying effort of the average farmer and to show him how to make more money. A study of weather reports for thirty years shows that there is little likelihood of a killing frost before that date, the statement continues. Killing frost was first observed here last year on October 2, but in 1920, the year of the bumper crop, no apparent damage to the corn was done before Oct. 29th.

In calling attention to these facts, the Institute issues a warning to the farmers in this vicinity who still have bins of good corn suitable for seeding not to yield to temptation to sell out at the high prices now offered for cash corn, but rather to save a plentiful supply for their new crop. The exceedingly late start and slow growth made by the corn crop this year gives grounds for the expectation that much corn will be caught by frosts this fall and rendered unfit for seed purposes. This applies particularly to the northern half of this corn belt, but this precaution is urged on all the farmers who grow corn.

"We have no means of knowing when frosts may be expected this fall," the statement concludes, "But it is at least a wise precaution for every corn grower to hold on to any good seed corn he may have until assured of a new supply. The germinating qualities of good seed corn when kept over a second year, are generally very good, provided the ears are stored in a dry, cool place"

Will New Lenox Get A Colored Settlement?

A great furoe was created in the village and in the town of New Lenox the latter part of the past week when a report became current that a move is on to locate a negroe settlement in New Lenox township. Whether this report has any truth in it is rather hard to say. So far there has been no real confirmation of the rumor.

For several weeks a Chicago real estate broker by the name of Halley has been securing options on a lot of New Lenox farm land close to a thousand acres it is said and all those giving options on their land say they did not know just what the land was to be used for. Frank Chamberlain of Pasadena, Cal., has given an option on 445 acres he owns in the eastern part of the town and Wm. Schmuhl has also given an option on 200 acres.

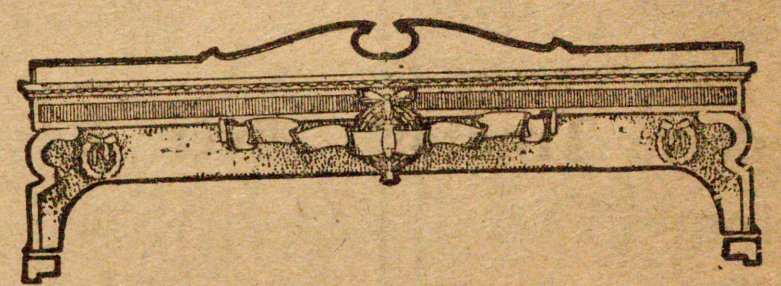

According to Mr. Schmuhl the broker sells the land he has an option on to any individual or syndicate that is able to pay the price.

It appears that a syndicate of colored men is in the field for land on which to locate a colored settlement known as the Liberia Improvement Association whose object is to erect schools, churches and colleges for the education of the negroe race and a representative of this association is said to have looked over the New Lenox land and was well pleased with the looks of things. It now all depends on if the colored folk can raise enough money to buy the land. If they can swing the deal they will require a thousand acres it is said, which would mean that they would need all the land between the Michigan Central and Rock Island railroads, extending from the Spencer road school house east to the New Lenox and Frankfort town line. Many of the citizens of New Lenox are much opposed to this deal, while on the other hand some of the land owners say they do not care who they sell their land to, be they white or black, just so they can pay the price. Quite a few years ago Chicago brokers got options on the same land when a move was on to locate the Chicago stock yards here, but nothing ever came of it. An option does not mean anything if the holder cannot meet the owners price.

The New Lenox people who have given options on their land have been offered $325 per acre for it is the report.

HUNTING SEASON OPENS

YOUR DAUGHTER'S HEALTH

Mothers of Ailing Daughters, Attention

How Two Mothers Helped Their Daughters by Giving them Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Every mother possesses information of vital importance to her young daughter, and the responsibility for the girl's future is largely in her hands.

When a school girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she suffers the consequences of wet feet, pain, headaches, fainting spells, loss of sleep and appetite and is irregular, her mother should have a care for her physical condition and give her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which has proved a reliable aid to nature for just such conditions in so many cases.

First Bottle Helped Her

Richmond, Indiana.—"I am sending this letter to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did my daughter. She was troubled with nervousness so that she was restless at night, and then she could not sleep and she was afraid of everything. She could not work as she was not strong enough, and she had to quit school at 14 because she was ill so much. The doctor said she had a nervous breakdown and her system was all run down. She had pains in her right side and through her back, and the medicine she took did her no good at all. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's advertisement in our paper, telling all that the Vegetable Compound had done for other women, so I said, 'We will try it out and see what it does.' She had not taken the first bottle before it began to help her, and we will always say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the best medicine she ever took."—Mrs. E. DAREY, 911 N. 16th Street, Richmond, Indiana.

An Ohio Mother Reports

Columbus, Ohio.—"When my daughter became 14 years of age she was ailing very much. The doctor gave her medicine, but she was very weak, and he always had to write excuses for her as she could not attend the 'gym' classes, and I often had to keep her home from school. I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and run-down condition, so I gave her three doses daily, and also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. Our friends are surprised to see how fine and tall she is getting and how well she is. I will gladly answer letters and give you a fine recommendation for other mothers."—Mrs. MARIE MIELKE, 814 Eber Street, Columbus, Ohio.

Over 100,000 women have so far replied to our question, "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

98 per cent. of these replies answer "Yes." That means that 98 out of every 100 women who have taken this medicine have been helped by it. For sale by druggists everywhere.

"My friend," asked the missionary, "are you traveling the straight and narrow path?"

In silence the man handed over his card which read: "Signor Ballancio, Tightrope Walker."—From the Square Deal.

Turning Tables

Mrs. Roy's negro cook, who went home every night the moment she had washed the dinner dishes, often forgot to come back in time to prepare breakfast the next morning.

Sara," said Mrs. Roy one day, "every time you fail to come and get breakfast I shall take off a quarter from your wages."

For a few mornings she came in early. Then one morning she did not appear until ten o'clock.

"Look here, Sara," complained Mrs. Roy, "I had to fix breakfast again this morning."

DANGER OF POOR EYES

POOR lighting and poor eyesight are responsible for one of every eight accidents.

Dr. R. E. Simpson, the engineer of the Travelers' Insurance company of Hartford, Conn., has made a nationwide study of the relation between accidents and vision. In a recent report to the Eyesight Conservation council he states that not only is poor eyesight one of the important causes of accidents, but that 66 per cent of American workmen have some defect of vision.

Good eyesight has always been an important factor in man's welfare. Among primitive men, living under natural conditions, it was probably the most important condition, not only for the avoidance of accidents, but also for the preservation of life itself.

The primitive savage came into a world in which everything was against him. He had no weapons to defend himself against savage animals or equally savage human enemies, except a stone or a club torn from a tree. Even if he were stronger than his enemies this availed him nothing unless he could see his enemy before his enemy saw him. He got his food from trees and bushes and from the bodies of wild animals killed in the chase. Unless he had sharp eyes he could not find and catch his dinner. The man with the best eyes got the best food and was best able to protect himself.

We are living today in an artificial and mechanical world, but the same principles are still in force.

The child with defective vision cannot take part in its companions' sports and pastimes, and so grows up with a weak and undeveloped body. Its poor vision exposes it to many dangers which its sharp-eyed companions avoid. The near-sighted child cannot see the approaching street car, railroad train or automobile.

Among grownups the near-sighted workman is more liable to accident than his normal associates.

"Accidents do happen," says Doctor Simpson. "There is a reason back of each one."

"An appalling number of accidents is due to defective vision. Sight is the most valuable protection against bodily injuries. Many workers start in handicapped by imperfect vision. Any workman whose eyesight is defective is not only an unsatisfactory worker, but is also a source of danger to himself and others."

If you are a parent, see that your child's eyes are tested and, if his vision is below normal, give him glasses that will put him on an equality with his playmates.

If you are a working man or woman, don't allow yourself to be handicapped by imperfect vision. Have your eyes examined, and if your vision is not normal get glasses that will enable you to do satisfactory work and that will protect you against accidents due to imperfect sight.

REMOVING THE TONSILS

REMOVING the tonsils in children is now a common operation. In extreme cases, where the child has had repeated attacks of tonsillitis, where the tonsils are so large as to interfere with breathing, or where the child is plainly being poisoned by absorption from the infected glands, there is no question as to the need and value of this treatment.

But how about the child with an occasional "sore throat" and moderately enlarged tonsils who is not quite as strong and well nourished as a healthy child should be? Will the removal of the tonsils benefit this child?

An answer to this question, on a large scale, has recently been given by Dr. Albert D. Kaiser of Rochester, N. Y. In a recent issue of the "Journal of the American Medical Association," he gives the results of a comparison of 1,200 children who had had their tonsils removed, with 1,200 who had not.

Three years ago a careful physical examination of all the school children in Rochester was made. A large number of children with diseased tonsils were found. The parents were asked in each case if they wished their child's tonsils removed. Over 5,000 children, with the consent of their parents, had their diseased tonsils taken out. Doctor Kaiser's report covers the present condition of 1,200 of these children as compared with the same number who were not operated on.

He finds that the children whose tonsils were removed have had fewer sore throats and colds during the last three years than those who did not have them removed; that it has reduced the amount of diphtheria and heart disease; and that the growth and nutrition of the children operated on are much better than those who kept their tonsils.

Doctor Kaiser's report shows that removal of the tonsils prevents any further attacks of "sore throat" due to inflammation of the tonsils. But it does more than this. It also reduces the danger of other throat infections.

Most children who have frequent "sore throats" are below the average in strength and resistance. The infected tonsils are an added handicap. Removing them gives the child a better chance to resist other children's diseases.

CHANCE, BASEBALL LEADER, IS DEAD

Manager of Chicago White Sox Dies Suddenly in Los Angeles.

Los Angeles.—Frank Chance, manager of the Chicago White Sox, died here after a long illness.

For several months Chance had been recuperating in southern California from a breakdown suffered in Chicago last spring in an attempt to resume active management of the team.

He was at his apartment here when another sudden attack caused his removal to the Good Samaritan hospital, where he died within a half hour.

The White Sox manager contracted influenza in Chicago last year, later developing asthma and other complications. He came to California, and after a few months felt so far recovered that he accepted the offer of Charles Comiskey, owner of the Chicago team, to come back and resume active management.

His stay in Chicago was tragically brief, however, and within a few weeks was again at Palm Springs, a health resort near here, fighting to win back his strength.

Frank Chance made his way into major league baseball in 1898 as a member of the old Cubs. He came from the Sullivan (Ill.) team, where he was a catcher. He remained with the Cubs as a catcher until 1903. Then Frank Selee, manager of the Cubs, saw in Chance the prospects of a great first baseman. He was assigned to the initial corner and later became one of the greatest first basemen and batsmen of all times.

During the season of 1905 Selee was forced to go to Denver for his health. He made Chance acting manager. The following year he was made manager. Selee having died during the winter of that year.

In 1906, his first year as a full-fledged major league manager, Chance piloted the Cubs to a National league pennant. The Cubs lost the world's championship that fall to the White Sox.

Chance won National league pennants with the Cubs again in 1907, 1908 and 1910. In 1907 and 1908 his club won the world's championship from the Detroit Tigers.

Last winter Chance was signed to manage the White Sox. But Chance never lived to see the day when he would pilot the destinies of the South side club.

Frank Chance was born at Fresno, Cal., on September 9, 1877. His father was vice president of a bank.

Chicago Gives World Flyers Great Reception

Chicago.—Sighted first far to the south along the lake shore, the three American around-the-world planes arrived in Chicago ahead of schedule. They were due to arrive about 1:30, but flew over the city shortly after noon.

Circling over the Grant park stadium, where they paid their official respects to the city, they then turned west toward the Maywood airfield. Lieutenant Smith landed first at 12:35, followed a few minutes later by Lieutenant Nelson in the New Orleans and Lieutenant Wade in the Boston.

Lieutenant Smith declared he was glad to be in Chicago, and that the welcome accorded them here was almost identical with that given them by Tokyo, Paris and London.

The trip from Dayton was without incident and the birdmen negotiated the 294 miles in two hours and fifty minutes. They were watched by the inhabitants of every town along the route, which followed closely that of the Pennsylvania railway.

Murphy, Veteran Driver, Killed in Auto Race

Syracuse, N. Y.—Jimmie Murphy of Vernon, Cal., favored to win the national racing championship of the American Automobile association for 1924 and veteran of many a speed classic, was killed on the state fair grounds here.

The car he was piloting crashed through the inner wooden fence on a curve during the one hundred and thirty-eighth lap of the 150-mile race.

The race was won by Phil Shafer in 1 hour, 54 minutes and 25.2 seconds, and Bennett Hill, teammate of Murphy, flashed over the line second.

This was the second fatality on the state fair track within a week. Monday Tommy Hinds, sixty-five-year-old Grand Circuit veteran, was killed when his sulky collided with one driven by Tommy Murphy.

Dario Resta, automobile racer, and "Pop" Geers, "grand old man" of harness horse racing, also were killed in races recently.

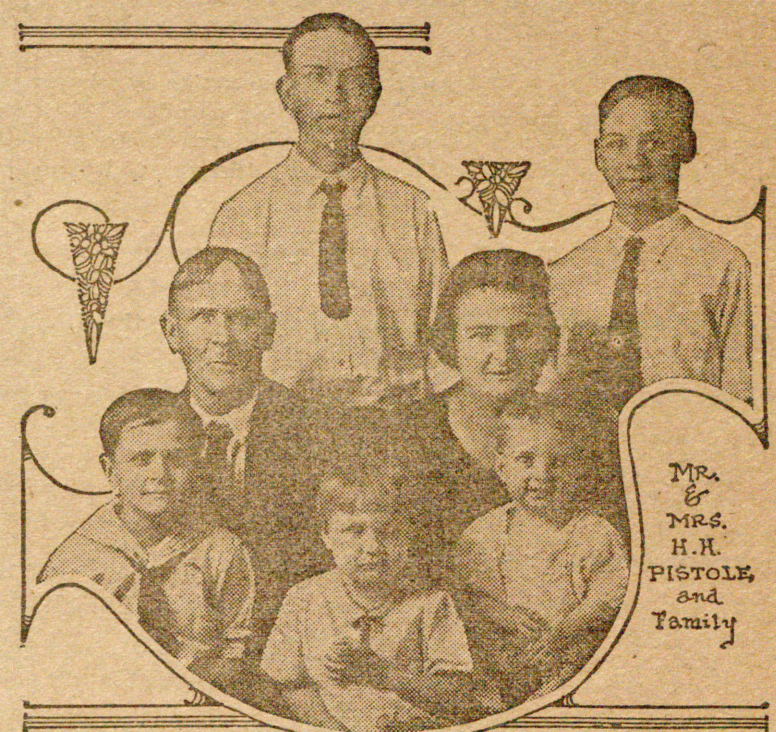

Cadet Aviator Killed

San Antonio, Texas.—Staff Sergeant J. C. Simms of the cadet group at Brooks field was killed and H. E. Hinton, a former cadet at the flying school at McAllen, was seriously injured when Hinton's plane crashed.

Revolution Not Serious

Washington.—Reports of the Ecuadorian revolutionary disturbances were received by the State department, but were not regarded seriously, it is announced.

WHOLE FAMILY ENDORSE TANLAC AS BEST TONIC

Mrs. H. H. PISTOLE and Family

"Tanlac has been our constant friend for years, and my wife and myself and eight children are all enjoying wonderful health, largely due to this medicine," is the remarkable statement of Harry H. Pistole, 310 Archer St., Waco, Texas.

"In my own case Tanlac has done what seemed to be impossible. When I began taking it my stomach was in such a bad fix that I had to live on a milk and egg diet and I was almost a skeleton. I had been flat on my back in bed and under treatment for 18 months and felt that my time was about up.

"After my case had been given up as hopeless and I thought I was beyond redemption a relative put me on to Tanlac, and the result is, I gained 20 pounds, and enjoy as good health as anybody could wish. "My wife was all broken down in health. But now she weighs 155 pounds, and is strong and well and I am giving Tanlac credit for it. We give Tanlac to the children to tone them up and make them grow, and nobody ever had a healthier set of children than we have.

"Tanlac is certainly the greatest medicine on earth for anyone whose life is wrecked by bad health. We sure do have a great deal to praise Tanlac for at my house."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 40 million bottles sold.

Tanlac Vegetable Pills for constipation; made and recommended by the manufacturers of Tanlac.

Quaint Bell Superstitions

For many years it was believed that the ringing of bells dispelled thunder. Records of English churchwardens occasionally have reference to this idea. In those of Sandwich, dated 1464, an item is set down for bread and drink supplied to "ryngers in the great thundering." Many and various were the ancient offices of bells. According to some monkish compiles the mottoes of a chime, one bell says, "Men's death I tell, by doleful knell"; another, "The winds so fierce I do disperse"; and a third, "Lightning and thunder I break asunder." Rural bell ringers often have a great affection for their bells, and in the superstitious way of their fathers ascribe to each some special virtue.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness are oftentimes symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

"Saving, eh?" commented the neighbor.

"I AM AN ACTRESS"

SYNOPSIS.—Thrown from his auto in a New York village, a man is carried unconscious into the home of a Miss Edith Grant. A doctor discovers he has been shot, fatally. Consciousness returning, he babbles of "millions." He begs that Henry Archman, millionaire resident of the vicinity, be sent for, declaring he has important papers for him. Archman cannot be reached by phone, but word is sent that his secretary is on the way. A man announcing himself as Archman's secretary, Akin, arrives, talks with Morbach, and leaves with a package he gives him. Morbach dies. Archman's arrival, with his secretary, reveals that the man posing as Akin is an impostor.

"He said that 'they' met him and followed him and attacked him. They wanted the papers that he was supposed to carry. But he did not carry them. His—employer—would give them only into 'her' hands. You must bring her to get them. She would be rich—exceedingly rich—and able to fight for her rights. You must bring her at once, either by the way you know or by the way explained in the packet. Once more he repeated his plea for haste—and died." The doctor turned to Miss Grant. "Does your recollection agree with mine, Miss Grant?" he asked.

Edith nodded. "Yes," she said; "exactly."

Archman's jaws hardened. "And they got the papers," he muttered. "How could they? How could they have known that Akin was expected?" Archman's eyes swept suspiciously over all in the room.

"I don't know." The doctor's voice had taken on a tinge of indignation. "Perhaps they overheard Miss Grant talking to your secretary on the telephone. The line is a party one and has half a dozen other telephones on it. What she said might have been overheard at any one of them."

Archman glanced toward the door. Then his secretary pulled him by the arm and he bent to listen. "Eh! What!" he shouted. "You mean that this is the woman?" He glanced at Edith. "You're sure?"

Akin nodded. "Yes; I'm sure," he declared.

Archman glared at the girl. "So!" he grated. "So it is a plant. I might have guessed."

Edith blanched. "What—what do you mean?" she gasped.

"Mean?" Archman laughed hoarsely. "I guess you know what I mean. You're in with them, too. You think you'll beat me, do you, miss? Well, you won't. Tell your employer that, miss!"

"Are you mad?" The doctor strode forward.

"Ask her whether I'm mad. Ask her whether she isn't the acting woman who snared my son, Harry. Ask her if she wasn't sent down here to finish her work? Ask her!"

Edith stepped forward. Except for two red spots that burned in her cheeks, her face was white. "Yes!" she said. "I am an actress. But I have not tried to snare your son, Harry. I have tried to avoid him. But this is my house. And as long as you are beneath its roof, I must ask you to treat me with respect. If you cannot do that, I must ask you to go."

CHAPTER III

One Way to Break In.

A year before the day on which the mysterious Morbach had met his mysterious death, Henry Archman had moved his family from Chicago to New York.

He did not want to leave Chicago. He had lived in the Lake city all his life, and he had spread his roots deep. His father, reputed to be well connected in his native land, Denmark, had brought him and his mother to the western metropolis fifty years before, and had opened a small grocery store, which many years later Henry Archman had expanded into the enormous meat-packing business of Archman & Company.

Henry Archman was sober, industrious, hard working, fond and proud of the country in which he had lived nearly all his life. He was perfectly happy, having everything he wanted—plenty of work and power over men and things. Like many another man, however, he was the victim of his family. He fought as long as he could against their desire to move to New York, but yielded at last.

Each of the family had his or her own reasons for wanting to migrate. Mrs. Archman, for instance, wanted to break into the Four Hundred and ultimately into the aristocracy of the Old world. She hoped to marry her daughters off to dukes, earls, or counts. Her daughter, Nellie, was not keen on titles, but she did want to meet eastern men. Her son, Harry, said he wanted to get a larger outlook on life, by which he meant that he wanted to find out if the Great White Way was as bad as it was painted. Her youngest daughter, Bessie, wanted to go because she was seventeen and liked anything that was new. When they all insisted, Archman surrendered. He moved to New York, bought a marble palace on Fifth avenue and another up on the Hudson.

He had long contemplated the opening of a New York branch, and two days after he reached Manhattan he had opened an office and had settled himself in it as firmly as if he had been there all his life. The fact that he had left Chicago did not mean at all that he had stopped building up his business. In fact, once he had gotten the New York branch to running smoothly he began to plan to get control of the meat supply that was beginning to come in from Argentina. Soon he determined to divert some of his transatlantic steamships to that part of the world. He selected one of his cattle boats, the El Rio, and sent her to the Ontario docks to be overhauled and fitted up with passenger accommodations, announcing that he was going to Argentina on it to open up the business. Day after day, accompanied by his daughter, Nellie, he visited the basin to see how the work was coming on. He paid little attention to his family's social progress.

Meanwhile Mrs. Archman was storming the social citadel. To aid her, she had unlimited millions, two handsome daughters, a good-looking son, and a somewhat vague claim, on her husband's side, to an aristocratic Danish ancestry.

Bess, the younger daughter, being a hearty, healthy American girl, made much good-natured fun of her mother's social aspirations. Continually she chaffed the elder lady, a mode of attack which Mrs. Archman took in good part and even enjoyed.

Early in the evening of the day when Morbach came to his death Mrs. Archman bustled in the parlor of her big country house, where her daughters were willing away the time till dinner should be served. She was smiling happily, so happily that Bess noticed it. "What's up, mummy?" she laughed. "Has Mrs. Van Astor-bilt thrown open the doors of the Four Hundred to you?"

Mrs. Archman blushed. Then she laughed guiltily. "Not Mrs. Van Astor-bilt," she answered. "Maybe she'll be next. This letter is from Lord George Caruthers."

Bess snickered. "Hall to Lord George!" she cried. "Who is he when he is at home?"

"He's an Englishman," explained Mrs. Archman. "He incloses a letter of introduction from Sir Butler Brayne."

"And who's Sir Butler Brayne, mummy? Another face card?"

"I met him at Mrs. Paxton's three months ago. He is engaged to Marjorie Paxton, you know. He's an attaché of the British embassy in Washington. I asked him to visit us, but he had to go back to Washington. It was very kind of him to give his friend a letter of introduction to us."

"Kind? Is that what you call it? Oh! Mummy, mummy! Where is your western independence? Perhaps he might do for Nellie, eh, mummy? No! No! We can buy something better than a mere baronet, even one with prospects!" The girl swung around in her seat. "Say, Nellie!" she called. "Wake up! We're talking about you. Do you want to consider baronets or need only earls apply?"

A girl who was playing softly at the piano turned toward the others. She was tall and fair, with a mass of chestnut hair and a pair of sweet, gray eyes—the sort of girl that is likely to cause trouble among the young men in the neighborhood in which she dwells. "What is it, Bess?" she asked.

The younger girl groaned. "Oh! Wake up and stop mooning," she cried. "Mother wants to know what sort of a title she shall buy you."

Mrs. Archman flushed. "Stop, Bess!" she exclaimed. "You're getting hopelessly vulgar. There's no question about buying anybody. But I do want you to know the right people."

Bess had an answer ready, Bess always did have an answer ready for anything and everything. This time Nellie forestalled her. "But who are the right people, mother?" she asked. "Are they men who have inherited things? Or are they men—splendid Americans—who are making their own way in the world with nothing but their own hands to help them? That's the sort of man I should like to meet and marry; that I should like to stand shoulder to shoulder with."

"Good heavens!" Bess flung up her hands in pretended horror. "And this from her royal highness, Princess Nellie!" she cried. "Say, Nellie, confide in your own little sister. She won't give you away. Where did you meet him?"

Nellie did not answer. As if repenting of her outburst, she had turned back to the piano and was again fingering the keys. She thus missed seeing the expression that had appeared on Mrs. Archman's face.

That poor lady had indeed been stricken with horror. Every word that Nellie had uttered was heresy in her eyes. Her ambitions for her girls were boundless, especially for Nellie, who from her earliest days had been dainty and queenly beyond compare. That Nellie might fall in love with a poor man had never entered her mind. Bess might do it, but Nellie—oh!—it passed belief.

Desperately she rose. "Where is your father?" she stammered. "He's late. Dinner's ready, and he's not here!"

"He isn't far away," Bess had noticed her mother's dismay, and she hastened to the rescue. "I think I hear him coming. Listen!"

Afar, the siren shriek of an automobile split the air.

"Uh-huh!" said Bess. "That's him. And if I can read auto language, he's mad. Who's done anything? Have you, Harry?"

The tall, slight youth of twenty-one, who had just entered the room, flushed uneasily. "I don't know what you mean!" he protested.

"I don't, either," Bess laughed. "But we'll find out soon. Let's look and see our doom approaching." She ran to the window and stared down the drive that led from the great gateway.

"What'd I tell you?" she demanded, as she saw a big auto plunging toward the house. It needed no expert to see that the man who drove it was furious.

Scarcely waiting to stop the engine he leaped out and hastened up the steps to the house. His face was grim.

Bess, however, ran to meet him. Bess was the one member of the household who was not in the least afraid of Mr. Archman. Others might pretend not to be, but their pretense was always hollow. Bess, on the other hand, never seemed to realize that she had any reason to be afraid.

It followed, naturally, that she never did have any reason to be so. It followed, also, that Archman was fonder far of her than he was of any other living creature, fonder even than he was of his wife, who, though strong-willed enough with every one else, was humble and obedient with her husband. Bess could twist the stubborn old man around her little finger.

She met him at the top of the steps. "Hello, pops!" she cried, teeth flashing, cheeks flaming, hair flying. "Hello, pops! What's it all about?"

Archman's face relaxed. An apology for a smile curved the corners of his mouth. "About six-thirty," he answered gruffly. "Time for dinner. Where's your brother?"

"Harry?" The girl planted a butterfly kiss on her father's cheek. "Poor Harry! What's he done now?" "None of your business, miss. Send him to my study instantly."

"Won't after dinner do, dads?" the girl pleaded. "Dinner's ready and you men are always so worked up until you're fed! Wait until after dinner, won't you?"

"No, I won't!" Mr. Archman turned. "Here, James, George, whatever your name is, tell my son I want him at once. At once. Understand?"

James, George—whatever his name was—fled with a mumbled "Yessir," and Archman plunged into his study and slammed the door behind him.

Five minutes later Harry Archman followed him. Harry was slight of build and shy of manner. One who sought might trace a resemblance between his features and those of the older man, but the expressions of the two were so different that few would have guessed that they were father and son. Moreover, the boy was clearly afraid of the man.

"You wanted to see me, father?" he questioned.

Who has impersonated Akin?
And why? And why is Archman so excited over the situation?

Why Blinks Had to Reach Home on Schedule Time

Promptly as the office clock struck five Blinks had unusual rapidity prepared to start for home.

As he hustled into his overcoat and made for the door his desk mate raised a surprised head. "What!" he said, "In a hurry again tonight? It's six nights now you've rushed home like this and haven't waited for a sooth at the old stand. I'm beginning to think, I've offended you, or something like that."

"No," Blinks laughed. "You haven't hurt my sensitive soul, but the fact is this, we've got a cook up at the house now, and while the missus didn't mind my rolling in late the cook won't stay unless I arrive every evening on time."

All practicality has to be tempered with humanity.

JESUS MAKING A MISSIONARY TOUR

LESSON TEXT.—Mark 1:35-45.
GOLDEN TEXT.—Thou canst make me clean.—Mark 1:40.
PRIMARY TOPIC.—Jesus Healing a Leper.

JUNIOR TOPIC.—Jesus and the Healing Leper.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC.—Jesus, the Great Physician.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC.—Medical Missions.

I. Jesus Praying (v. 35).

After a series of most strenuous efforts, Jesus retired to a lonely place to pray. Doubtless He felt the need of having His spiritual strength recruited. He who the day before had shown His mighty power in casting out devils and banishing disease now needed to be alone with God. In order to do this He arose long before daylight. He had slept at Peter's house and withdrew to a solitary place unperceived. The very best time to pray is in the morning when our physical powers have been renewed.

II. Found by Peter (vv. 36, 37).

His work of the preceding day had made such a profound impression that the multitudes sought Him. Since the people were so aroused the disciples thought that it was the opportune time to press the campaign. For that reason Peter, and perhaps Andrew, James and John, eagerly sought Him and told Him what the multitudes were doing.

III. Preaching in Other Towns (vv. 38, 39).

The great Missionary persisted in His program despite the success which had attended His efforts at Capernaum. Popularity in a given place is not the criterion by which to determine the wisdom of remaining there. He preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee and cast out demons, for it was for this very purpose that He came forth from the Heavenly Father.

IV. Jesus Heals a Leper (vv. 40-45).
This deed is highly significant. It not only shows His mighty power and divine love but it is symbolic. Leprosy is a type of sin.

(1) It was defiling. The leper was an outcast because of this defilement. Sin banishes from the presence of God.

(2) It was incurable. There was no cure for leprosy. Only God could cure it. So there was but one remedy for the cancellation of guilt—the removal of man's sin—that is the cross of Christ.

(3) It is contagious. It spreads from one to another. Segregation was necessary in order to keep it from spreading. Sin is contagious.

(4) It is in the blood. Sin is hereditary.

1. His Great Need (v. 40). This caused him to break through all ceremonial regulations and cast himself at the Savior's feet. The sinner's great need should cause him to break through all barriers and cast himself at the feet of Jesus.

2. His Request (v. 40). He was quite sure of Jesus' ability to cure him. He knew quite well that no human physician could do this but he was somewhat doubtful as to His willingness. We can be assured to-day, not only of His ability, but His willingness.

3. The Compassionate Lord (v. 41). He put forth His hand and touched the leper. Only the divine Lord could touch a leper and not be defiled. Accompanying the touch was the declaration of His willingness to heal. No doubt this greatly strengthened the leper's faith but startled the people who looked on.

4. An Immediate Cure (v. 42). Divine healing is always instantaneous and complete. This is the outstanding difference between divine healing and the so-called "faith healing."

5. His Stern Charge (vv. 43, 44). Christ dismissed him with a strict charge that he should not make this known. The reason for this was that wide publicity would create such excitement as to interfere with His preaching. Furthermore, he was still ceremonially unclean. His going to the priests with a proper offering would indicate his regard for the laws and customs of Moses and therefore disarm prejudice.

6. Willful Disobedience (v. 45). Instead of rendering grateful obedience he blazed it abroad and thus hindered the Lord's work. Thus we see that the stupid self will of one man may prevent many from hearing and seeing the blessings of the Lord's preaching and healing.

ORLAND

The public auction sale of Mrs. R. M. Cooper, which was held Thurs. Sept., 11, was well attended. The crowd arrived at ten o'clock sharp and stayed until five p. m. when the auctioneers stopped for supper, beginning again at six o'clock and continuing until midnight.

Everything was sold at a reasonably good price and everyone seemed to be very well supplied when the sale closed.

The auctioneers, Chas. Erickson of Mokena and Edward Schmaedke of Orland put in their best efforts to make the sale the big success it was. Ona McGovney of Mokena and Wm. Keuch served as clerks and also put in their best services. Altho the sale entailed a lot of hard work everyone did their best to put it over big.

The Royal Neighbors of Laurel Camp met at the home of Mrs. Earl Reich Thursday afternoon. After business a delightful luncheon was served by the hostess.

News comes from Harvey that our former troubleman, Harry Heiting, now employed by the Bell Telephone Co., there, will be assigned to Orland again. Friends of the Heiting are very pleased about the transfer.

Many Orland residents attended the Kankakee fair last week.

Friday evening, relatives of Mr. Geo. and Miss Sophia Weiland gathered at the Martin Smith home to surprise them on their return from Mokena. The evening was pleasantly passed playing games, music and dancing. A fine lunch of sandwiches, cake, salad and coffee was served by Mrs. Smith.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Tash and sons, Jack and Alquin of Maywood; Miss Elizabeth Smith of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Smith and daughters, Hazel and Eliene, Mr. and Mrs. H. E. DIVERSIFIED FARMING VS. ONE CROP GAMBLING

Agricultural Director of the American Bankers Association Tells of Efforts to Solve Farmers' Problems.

One of the leading problems that is confronting many of our states is that of diversified farming, says D. H. Otis, Agricultural Director of the American Bankers' Association.

"During the past year the Agricultural Commission of the association has arranged for conferences in eight of the twelve Federal Reserve districts," he says. "At these conferences we have tried to get in touch with the agricultural needs of the respective regions and advise with the bankers and others interested as to what the banks might do to help in their solution. A resolution adopted in the Fifth District serves as an example of what is needed in many sections:

"Encouragement of a proper system of diversified farming in which farmers will grow as far as practical all the food and feed crops necessary for feeding the family and livestock of the farm, and to keep on the farms the requisite kinds and amounts of livestock best to meet the economic needs of farming in this district."

"The conference in the Ninth District emphasized strongly the need of greater diversification. The farmer who raises nothing but wheat is unwise, even foolish. He is one of the worst kinds of gamblers, one who gambles on the weather, on insects, on drought, and various other things that affect the quality of the product. The farmer who raises wheat and along with it the other crops and keeps a reasonable amount of livestock has something to fall back on when wheat is plentiful and cheap. He is not putting all of his eggs in one basket."

Diversification for Contentment
"In many of the states the first step in diversified farming is to get the farmer to raise sufficient livestock to feed his own family. He needs to get a cow, sow and a couple of dozen chickens so that his own needs can be supplied without going into debt at the store. Livestock used to furnish food for the family will frequently consume large amounts of feed that would otherwise go to waste. Livestock enables the family to set a better table and live under more healthful conditions. More work is furnished to the family, making possible larger family income. If the farm family is producing enough to feed itself, there will be much more contentment and much less idle time in which to criticize the government."

"The Agricultural Commission is doing all in its power to encourage a sane system of diversified farming. The subject is being discussed at various conferences, articles and editorials are being published for the purpose of acquainting bankers with the importance of this work."

Bankers Are Assisting
"It is encouraging at these conferences to find that the bankers are incorporating the subject of diversified farming in their program and laying plans in every way possible to carry it out. To this end we have records of a number of banks who are putting up money to their farmers to purchase livestock. They are encouraging boys and girls to go into club work."

"For the coming year we hope to carry on this work in greater detail and as far as possible hold conferences with the officers and members of the agricultural committee in each of the respective states at the Agricultural College. We believe that in co-ordinating this work with the college, we will reap the benefit of team effort. We are pleased with the hearty response we are receiving from the various colleges of agriculture and we believe that the opportunity is great for influencing various communities in better types of farming and in improved methods of business management."

Banker-Farmer Notes

Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, banks and Chamber of Commerce at the beginning of 1923 mapped out a vigorous program for the promotion of agriculture in the county. Throughout the year they assisted in keeping the farm organizations functioning and distributed to them agricultural bulletins and information of interest. They held rural community meetings and entertainments, exhibits of farm and home products, and advertised home products. One specific result was to induce a milk receiving station to locate in the vicinity, and during the first month $20,000 was paid the farmers for their milk. This marked the turning point in the farmer's business.

California bankers created an emergency fund of $1,000,000 at a meeting recently in San Francisco to combat the foot-and-mouth disease which has broken out in that State. The Federal and State governments each pay one-half of the appraised value of the animals slaughtered, and the State government was not prepared to meet this unexpected expense. The bankers agreed to supply the funds needed as a loan to the State government.

The Vermont Bankers Association offered $1,000 to winning club members in 1923. Part of the funds was used for prizes for project leaders, but between five and six hundred dollars was awarded to outstanding boys and girls winning in the various projects.

"Station-to-Station" Calls

A "STATION-TO-STATION" call is a long distance connection between any two telephones (including private branch exchange switchboard operator) as distinguished from a call between individuals.

Under "station-to-station" rates a charge is made where a connection is established with anyone at the called telephone, but the charge is about 20 per cent lower than for a "person-to-person" call.

To make a "station-to-station" call, ask for "Long Distance," give the operator the number of the distant telephone (or the name of the subscriber if you do not know the number) and tell the operator you will talk to anyone who answers.

A Fleet of Vehicles in Your Service

No. 13 in a series of statements about the Company's business.

PROMPT transportation of materials and men is necessary in serving 252,981 customers with gas or electricity.

For this purpose Public Service Company has 363 vehicles of various types in daily use, traveling last year, in your service, 3,028,000 miles.

These include such labor saving devices as the pole-hole digger, consisting of a 3½-ton truck on which is mounted an air compressor and air cylinder with boom for supporting the auger motor and orange peel auger. When the hole is dug this boom is used to handle the pole.

Trailers for handling transformers and other heavy and bulky equipment, heavy duty trucks, gas fitters' trucks, utility and special service trucks, cars and motorcycles, together with tractors for use in erecting steel towers, form this unusual fleet.

Without these many different types of vehicles it would not be possible to respond to your needs with the promptness that is the Company's policy.
